Life's just rosy in Lee family pigpen

Collection of pigs hits about 2,000

By Linda M. Hickman

Lynda Lee admits her house is a real pigsty. In fact, she's proud of it.

About 2,000 pigs live with the Lee family. They don't eat much, but they do take up a great deal of space.

The pigs, made of such materials as cardboard, fabric, glass, pewter, wood and bronze, constitute a definite motif in the decor.

Lee wears pig jewelry, cooks in pig-shaped casserole dishes and has pig-covered towels in her bathroom. She also has five pig-of-the-month calendars on her walls.

And then there are the "wana be pigs," which include a

Twin Pomona police officers follow same track through life

By Jack Burson

It seems that Dave and Don Sevesind have been on the same track since they were born 10 minutes apart 30 years ago in Arcadia.

The identical twins still are — as officers on the Pomona Police Department.

The Sevesind brothers said they were attracted to police work from jobs as iron workers because they sought a greater challenge. They both were certified welders and worked side by side on jobs around California.

Dave, the oldest of the two, entered the Marine Corps fresh out of high school and Don got married. But Dave followed Don into welding after he left the service and later joined him in police work.

What attracted him?

"When I saw what Don was into," he said, "I decided to try it."

Both now say that despite the hazards, they really like police work and plan to stay.

"It's a good feeling, being out there helping people," said Don.

Both agree that the way they have stuck together has not been a coincidence.

Officials hope new water plant will ease shortages

By David Madsen

Local water utility officials are hopeful when the $22 million Agua De Lejos water treatment plant in Upland goes on-line soon — it will remove any threat of future water shortages in the area.

Rapid growth during recent years has caused the demand for water in local cities to start outgrowing local ground water supplies.

"We knew back in the 1960s we (the area) were going to grow. But we didn't anticipate growing as fast as it did," said Larry Dilley, Upland water utilities director.

Plans to build the plant got under way in the early 1980s and construction started two years ago, Dilley said.

The plant is located on a 16-acre site at 17th Street and Benson Avenue.

Final construction is expected to be completed by late 1988.

Production is expected to get under way by mid-August, Dilley said.

donkey, a bulldog and a bear who are wearing pig noses or masks.

But even stranger than this is a sizable sow with a skeleton in her closet. "This one was Christopher but it had a sex change so now it's Christine" in tribute to Christine Jorgenson, Lee said. The pig's transsexualism consists of the fact that the Lees have recently given it long eyelashes.

Lee said the roots of her 10-year collection lie in the fact that her husband Michael is a sergeant with the Los Angeles County Sheriff's Department.

"Cops are called pigs," she said. "If you can't beat them, you join them."

Sgt. Lee said many law enforcement officers he knows take the term "pig" and "run it back as a symbol of pride."

He said, "There are cops who are offended, but you ride with it. You take it and twist it to your own advantage."

In fact, Lee said many of the pigs are named after sheriffs.

Although stuffed swine and pig figurines may not seem overly plentiful in local boutiques, Lee said she has had no trouble acquiring additions to her collection.

"They just multiply," she said. In her collection are pigs brought by friends and relatives from Switzerland, Germany, England, Mexico and Canada, as well as from multiple states.

Lee said a friend bought her a pig in France, and "of course on the back it said 'made in Hong Kong.'"

She said she is expecting to receive pigs this summer from Australia, New Zealand and Fiji.

She has made more than 20 of the pigs herself, and countless others have been gifts.

"I have a lot of super neat friends ... when they see pigs they think of me," she said. "A lot of people would take that as an insult, but I take it as a compliment."

She said, "No one's ever had a problem thinking of anything to buy for me."

Sgt. Lee said the pigs are like additional children and his wife agrees.

"I always said if we ever have a fire the kids get out first then the pictures ... now the pigs will go, too."

Ridesharing's the answer to freeway traffic woes

By Sarah E. Crowley

It's an all too familiar California scenario.

You're trapped inside your car on the freeway. Vehicles stretch for miles ahead of you, and thousands of windshields glisten in your review mirror. This is gridlock at its very worst, and unfortunately, horrendous traffic problems have become a way of life in California.

According to the Commuter Computer organization, there are more than 20 million registered vehicles rumbling through California; and residents logged more than 210 billion miles on their cars within the state in 1987. It's going to get worse, too.

But take heart. There is a solution for all of us crabby drivers — and it's easier than we might imagine.

Ridesharing is the magic word.

Gov. George Deukmejian proclaimed the week of Oct. 3-7 as California Rideshare Week. The idea, of course, was to encourage commuters from Eureka to San Diego to ease that rush-hour congestion by utilizing alternative means of transportation. Chief among those alternatives is sharing the ride with a fellow employee.

Supporting the fall campaign were a number of transportation heavyweights, including Caltrans, the state's transportation agency; as well as statewide ridesharing organizations such as Computer Commuter of Los Angeles.

The highlight of the week was to be "California Pool Party," on Oct. 6. On that day, commuters will be challenged to give up their lonesome traveling habits for just one day.

To that end, Commuter Computer and Arco co-sponsored a kick-off luncheon earlier that week for the Greater Los Angeles Press Club at Burbank's Equestrian Center.

Veteran traffic reporter Bill Keene of KNX radio hosted the affair. Keene was assisted by such fellow broadcasters as Chuck Street of KIIIS radio and Paul Johnson of KABC's Metro Traffic. Between them, they managed to bring home the idea that something has to be done.

"I've been in this business for 15 years," said Keene. "Back then, there wasn't enough traffic news to fill up a minute broadcast. Now, if you can get just a small portion of all the accidents into a minute, you're a genius."

R.C. may ban use of plastic foam

By Lee Peterson

Rancho Cucamonga could be the first city in San Bernardino County to ban the use of plastic foam containers made with suspected ozone-damaging chemicals.

The City Council has ordered its city attorney to draft an ordinance that would prohibit the fast-food outlets and restaurants from packing their food in plastic foam containing chlorofluorocarbons.

The chemical has been identified as contributing to the decay of the ozone — the protective layer of the earth's atmosphere that helps to filter out the sun's ultraviolet rays.

Councilwoman Deborah Brown said recently she was going to begin working with Rancho Cucamonga administrative assistant Diane O'Neal to direct the city attorney's office in the writing of the ordinance.

Brown said the ordinance will be based on one written by the city of Berkeley. The Berkeley proposal awaits final consideration by the City Council.

The ordinance, Brown said, would require businesses to gradually phase out all use of plastic foam containing chlorofluorocarbons.

A resolution similar to the proposed Rancho Cucamonga ordinance recently failed to win approval from the Redlands City Council.

Brown said she will solicit the opinion of the Rancho Cucamonga Chamber of Commerce.

Deputy city attorney Andrew Arczynski was told to have a draft ordinance back for City Council consideration by Aug. 17.

The quartet are Ina Abelar of Pomona, instructional support technician for the physics department; Rosalee Nusser of Glendora, College of Science instructional support center supervisor; James Kilroy of Orange, director of Cal Poly's computer center; and Dr. John Welch, medical director at the Health Center.

Selection of recipients for distinguished Staff Emeriti Awards began in April when a special committee compiled a list of staff members retiring during the 1987-88 academic year. To be eligible for consideration, a retiring staff member must have a minimum of 10 years service with the university.

Two hundred twenty-five students were named to the spring semester dean's honor list at California Lutheran University.

Listed on the list from this area are Roger Rude of Claremont; Linda Van Zandt of Cucamonga; Paul Wenz of Ontario; and Gregory Maw of Upland.

Constance Jordan, newly appointed associate professor of English at The Claremont Graduate School, is one of 65 scholars from across the United States selected to receive a fellowship from the American Council of Learned Societies. Jordan's award will help fund a study of "True Monarchies: King and Commonwealth in Shakespeare's Romances."

A specialist in Medieval and Renaissance literature, Jordan has also conducted research on literary defenses of women and on feminist literary theory. She is the author of dozens of professional articles and reviews, and has also written a book, "Pulci's Morgante: Poetry and History in Fifteenth-Century Florence." She is writing a second book, "Renaissance Feminism: Literary Defenses of Women in Early Modern Europe."

Sewer assessment district sought for the heights

By David Madsen

The Upland City Council is requesting that the San Bernardino County Board of Supervisors create a sewer assessment district in San Antonio Heights.

The council wants the county to build a sewer system in the unincorporated area to prevent local ground water supplies from becoming polluted by septic tank waste water.

Upland Water Utilities Director Larry Dilley said the septic tanks pose no immediate problem to the water, but over a period of years they could.

"Bacteria in the tanks digest solid waste ... and the remaining liquid goes into a leech field which filters into the ground," he said.

Over a period of years nitrates from the septic tanks can work their way into the water table and make water unsafe for babies and young children to drink.

"The nitrate problem can cause Blue Baby Syndrome, which causes babies to quit breathing and turn blue," he said.

"Some day that stuff will get down to the water table. I'd rather pay for a modern sewer system than trying to clean up the water supplies," said Dilley.

The number of septic tanks in San Antonio Heights has proliferated in recent years as the area has developed.

The new sewer system would be able to hook up to Upland's system once it was in place, said Councilman Frank Carpenter.

Because the county is experiencing budgetary problems, Carpenter suggested it consider creating an assessment to provide the necessary funds for the project.

Junior high dances are planned

The Rancho Cucamonga Community Services Department announces it will sponsor junior high dances for those 12 to 14.

The programs will involve lots of music, dancing and fun. Deeja's will spin some tunes.

A dance will be held Aug. 27 at Lions Park Community Center, 9161 Base Line Road, Rancho Cucamonga, from 6 to 9 p.m.

The cost is $3 per person. School identification, shirts and shoes are required.

Wright said.

In addition to Rancho Cucamonga's council, Brown will take the ordinance to the West End Solid Waste Alternatives Coalition.

Brown is Rancho Cucamonga's representative to the coalition. One of the member cities of the group, Rialto, already has expressed interest in reviewing the draft ordinance as soon as possible, Brown said.

The danger posed by chlorofluorocarbons, experts say, comes many years after the material containing the chemical has been discarded and begins to break down.

Many fast-food outlets already have begun to switch over to the use of containers that are made without chlorofluorocarbons.

Water

When fully operational, the plant will be capable of treating 70 million gallons of water per day.

The plant is operated by the Water Facilities Authority/Joint Powers Agency, which has owned water districts from Upland, Ontario, Montclair, Chino and San Bernardino County (for Chino Hills).

Upland will receive 14.7 percent of the water, Ontario 29.4, Montclair 29.4, San Bernardino 14.7 and Chino 11.6.

Water for the plant is purchased from Northern California and travels down the California Aqueduct, Dilley said.

The treatment process involves four steps where the water is chemically treated to separate dirt particles from the water allowing them to sink to the bottom of sedimentary basins located in the plant.

close," Don said. "We believe we're closer than brothers who are not twins."

In fact, they appear to communicate without speaking.

The brothers were putting themselves through the Rio Hondo College Police Academy about a year apart and both were a month from graduating when each was hired as a recruit for the Pomona Police Department. Don was hired May 20, 1982, and Dave Jan. 11, 1983.

Don was rated No. 1 cadet in his class at Rio Hondo. Dave was rated No. 2 in his class.

Both are rated distinguished experts in the use of the .45-caliber pistol.

At Pomona, both went through a six-month period of "phase training," part of a one-year probationary period. They were given six different field training officers over the six-month phase training.

Later, while they didn't actually work together, they sometimes worked the same shift and often backed up each other on calls.

Working the same shift led to an incident in which a motorist felt he was being harassed.

"He complained to a supervisor that he had gotten a ticket in north Pomona and must have been followed by the same guy who gave him another ticket in south Pomona a few minutes later," Don said. "He complained that the officer had followed him out of his assigned beat."

But it took only a few minutes for the supervisor to determine that the driver had been cited first by one brother and later by the other.

In 1985 Dave was awarded the Police Department's gold Medal of Valor, its highest award. It was presented to him by then-Police Chief Donald J. Burnett for entering a burning two-story house three times on July 15, 1984, to rescue a man sleeping upstairs. He was forced outside for air twice before he was able to rescue the man.

Dave worked for six months on the Narcotics Street Sales Task Force before he volunteered to become a motorcycle officer. He completed a two-week course at the San Diego Police Department before being assigned as one of Pomona's three motorcycle officers. He's been one for a year now and says he enjoys it — even though "it's a lot more hazardous than driving in a car," he said.

The assignment calls for a two-year commitment. After one year on the big Kawasaki 1000, Dave said he already has decided to go for another two-year stint.

Dave said that while traffic enforcement may not be popular among some drivers, he views it as a public service.

"Some driver may get home safely because another has been given a citation for the way he was driving," he said.

He said the large majority of motorists he stops accept the ticket gracefully. Some even thank him, he said.

"They know what they've done," he said.

"But there's a small percentage that complains, regardless of what they've done," he added.

As a motorcycle officer, Dave sees speeding as probably the most serious violation. When the 100-year-old R.C. house offered to city at no cost

By Lee Peterson

Robert Flocker wants to give away a house.

House hunters should know there's a catch: He not only wants someone to take the house off his hands but also off his land.

Flocker has given first rights at the deal to the city of Rancho Cucamonga, which is considering making the nearly 100-year-old home a local historical landmark.

The City Council has until Oct. 5 to decide whether to accept the house, and a year after that to remove it from his Etiwanda Avenue property, Flocker said.

The Alta Loma High School teacher made the offer to the city in response to the city's historic preservation commission's recommendation to make a local landmark of the Fisher House, which sits on Flocker's property at 7165 Etiwanda Ave.

Flocker balked at the commission's plans, unwilling to foot the bill for the price of the house's restoration, estimated at $100,000.

The city, on the other hand, has expressed no willingness to dip into its coffers to pay for the renovation.

Councilman Jeffrey King said he does not see Flocker's offer as an ultimatum.

King, considered the council member most sympathetic to Flocker's argument, said the matter will likely be resolved by the end of September in a way that will make everybody happy.

City Planner Brad Buller said Flocker would like to see what the council thinks of his latest offer before he himself considers any other proposals about the preservation of the house.

Flocker said recently he does not know what he will do if the council rejects his offer, but in the past he has suggested that he will take legal recourse if the Fisher House is made a historical landmark while it remains on his land.

Discussion of incentives to restore the house are premature as Flocker has no immediate plans to develop the 5-acre parcel, King said.

"I'm certainly doing my part and offering to donate the house for free. I'm trying to do my part, they should be willing to do their part too," Flocker said.

"I think (the city) has the resources and ability to restore it that I don't have," he said.

Sweep, don't water, that driveway

That admonition on a poster — reinforced with a picture of a push broom — is one in a long list of tips area water purveyors hope more residents and homeowners will employ to conserve dwindling supplies of water.

While there is evidence that residents are joining the conservation effort, more effort is needed to forestall the possibility of serious water shortages, said Rick Hansen, general manager of Three Valleys Municipal Water District.

After two extremely dry years with less than normal rainfall, virtually all of the area's water is coming from storage reservoirs and underground aquifers.

Although area residents have escaped the severe impacts of the two-year drought, another dry year could bring water rationing to the valley.

Meanwhile, Three Valleys and other area water districts have joined agencies throughout the state in an effort to achieve significant voluntary conservation.

Voter registration classes slated

Ongoing classes are being held on voter registration procedures, according to Gerane B. Jacobsen, San Bernardino County Registrar of Voters.

Anyone who will be conducting a voter registration drive for the Nov. 8, 1988, general election must attend a class before being issued Affidavits of Registration.

The classes are scheduled, subject to reservations, each Wednesday morning from 10 to 11 at the Registrar of Voters Office, 777 E. Rialto Ave., San Bernardino. Please phone 387-2097 for reservations or further information.

maximum speed was raised to 65 mph, people just drove faster, he said.

Don had to complete a three-year period on patrol in a radio car before he could volunteer to be an observer aboard the Police Department's helicopter.

"That's so you have the necessary street knowledge," he said.

"It is the same for a motor officer," said Dave. "It requires three years on routine patrol."

Don, who had never done any flying before, has been an observer now for more than three years.

"You can quote me," he said, "I love it."

It's hazardous too, isn't it?

"We're constantly getting shot at," he said. "We haven't been hit in this helicopter. But our old 47 (Bell 47G) was hit once."

Who's shooting at them? "Gang members, drunks in their back yard. Anybody and everybody who's got a gun, it seems like," he said.

He said the mission of the helicopter is to assist officers on patrol in radio cars on the ground.

"We can be at the location of a call within a few seconds," he said. "We can light up the area (with a 30,000-candle-power searchlight) so the arriving officers are not completely in the dark."

"I know it's scary moving into unfamiliar territory in the dark on foot — not being able to see what's around the corner of a house or in the back yard."

The normal patrol altitude for the helicopter is about 500 feet, he said. But in cases of surveillance, such as drug investigations, the helicopter may climb to 1,000 or 1,500 feet.

The new helicopter, an Enstrom 280FX, replaced two Bell 47Gs in 1985.

Sevesind uses binoculars and special night vision goggles as he searches the ground for suspicious activities, or responds to calls.

Civil Air Patrol cadets looking up

By Rebecca Pavitt Raney

Customs and courtesies, attitude and discipline, moral leadership, honor codes — they're ideas far from the minds of most young people, but 24 area teen-agers immersed themselves in such elusive notions all weekend recently.

They graduated on a recent Sunday from the Civil Air Patrol's basic cadet school at the Ontario Air National Guard Station south of the airport.

As cadets, the 13- to 18-year-old youths will meet with their squadrons once a week in a program similar to ROTC.

They'll practice marching and study aerospace. They'll also learn about rescue operations; cadets with emergency certification can join pilots on missions.

Many of them plan to join the U.S. Air Force. As an offshoot of the Air Force reserves, the CAP can prepare them for life in the military.

"Obviously, we want to get these kids into a blue uniform as soon as possible," said reserve Capt. Bill Hemphill before the graduation.

For those cadets who want to enter the U.S. Air Force Academy — and many of them do — joining the CAP is worth as many points as becoming an Eagle Scout, Hemphill said.

During the graduation, the cadets marched in formation for their assembled friends and relatives as jetliners took off from Ontario International Airport in the background.

Several of the cadets said before the ceremony that they hope this won't be the last time they march in a military graduation.

"I've always been interested in the military service since I was 6 years old," said 13-year-old Neil Perrin of Chino.

Perrin wants to go to the academy and become a pilot.

But he'll have to compete for a slot with at least one fellow cadet, 14-year-old Shanin Cook of Pomona.

NO REASONABLE OFFER REFUSED

Nolan no longer supports ban

By David Madsen

In a controversial move, Upland Mayor Robert Nolan announced last week he is no longer supporting a proposed moratorium on apartment construction in the city.

Nolan, who headed up the three-member council majority favoring the ban, said he now favors creation of a new ordinance that would more strictly regulate apartment construction.

"I changed my position because I just don't think it's the way to go," Nolan said.

"A moratorium would keep business and people out of Upland when we need them," he said.

Ban proponents have been fighting to halt the construction of apartments primarily in Upland's older residential neighborhoods in the southeast area.

But city officials have said the only way to legally enforce an apartment moratorium would be to halt construction citywide.

There are about 130 acres of "underdeveloped" land left in the city where apartments still could be constructed without a ban, said Planning Director Jeff Bloom.

Most of that property is in the southeast, he said.

Despite losing Nolan's support, apartment ban proponent Don Lane says he still will press for action.

"I'd like to see an interim control ordinance like they have in Los Angeles," Lane said.

The zoning for much of the southeast allows developers to consolidate a few lots and build apartments with a maximum of 30 units per acre.

Lane wants these areas to be down-zoned to permit only single-family residences.

The new ordinance Nolan supports would force all apartment projects with more than two units to go through the public hearing process and be reviewed by the council before being approved.

In the past — as long as zoning permitted — apartment projects which met zoning requirements were not required to hold public hearings, except if the consolidation of lots was involved.

"I don't buy that (the new ordinance)," said Lane. "It's business as usual. Thirty dwelling units (now allowed) per acre are too much and so is 20."

"Public hearings don't work. We have been going down and protesting and they continue approving apartments," he said.

The council will consider the

Robert Nolan

new ordinance at its Aug. 23 meeting.

Decision draws mixed reaction

By David Madsen

The announcement by Upland Mayor Robert Nolan that he no longer supports an apartment construction moratorium drew both praise and criticism from his council colleagues last week.

"Well, I guess the election's over," said Councilman Frank Carpenter.

Carpenter said that Nolan had used the moratorium as a political issue to defeat him in the April mayoral race.

"It (the moratorium) was just a means to an end when he was elected," Carpenter said.

During the campaign Carpenter had opposed Nolan's proposal for a "controlled moratorium" on all construction.

Nolan had advocated a total moratorium, partially to halt the controversial 1,496-unit San Antonio Lakes project.

However, Carpenter would only support limiting apartment construction in southeast Upland.

"I spoke against the moratorium, and it cost me the election," Carpenter said.

However, Nolan explained that he changed his mind on the day before about supporting a moratorium on new apartment construction because he now believes it would be bad for the local economy.

"A moratorium would keep business and people out of Upland when we need them," he said.

In July, Nolan, Carpenter and Councilman Al Canestro each said they would support an apartment moratorium for a limited period of time.

The ban was to provide the city with time to study the impact new apartment buildings were having on the southeast area.

Residents have been

"I spoke against the moratorium, and it cost me the election."

—Frank Carpenter

protesting multi-unit housing going into the mostly single-family neighborhoods in the area.

However, Nolan now supports a new ordinance to require all new apartment projects of more than two units to be reviewed by the council and public before being approved.

Canestro said he thinks the new ordinance will help ease overdevelopment in the southeast.

"I like the idea of having control. The problem as I see it is that developers pick up two or three parcels and develop them to the maximum," he said.

"We've got to have some overall policy on density. I would like to see them rolled back to 20-units per acre," he said.

Councilwoman Rosalie Kamansky also voiced her approval of Nolan's decision.

"I think it (the new ordinance) would work to lower density," she said.

"A moratorium would stop everything — it's not a good idea," she added.

Councilman Thomas McGilloway was out of town and unavailable for comment.

However, he has been a staunch opponent of imposing a moratorium in the past.

YOUR BENEFITS UNDER WORKERS' COMPENSATION

Thomas W. Moga,
Attorney At Law
(Board Certified Specialist)

A WORD OF CAUTION TO EMPLOYERS FROM AN ATTORNEY THAT REPRESENTS INJURED EMPLOYEES

All of us, including myself, are concerned about the high cost of Worker's Compensation insurance. Perhaps by reading this article you may be able to save some insurance premium dollars.

First, you must accept the fact that it is going to cost your insurance carrier more money if your injured employee is represented by an attorney. The reasoning is simple. An attorney is going to see that his client receives all the benefits available. Also, the attorney is going to use medical doctors and chiropractors that are not associated with the employer or the insurance company. It is the attorney's function to maximize the client's recovery. This is going to cost you or your insurance carrier more dollars. How can you prevent an injured employee from seeking the assistance of a lawyer skilled in Worker's Compensation? This is difficult but perhaps it can be done, if you follow these simple suggestions:

1. TREAT YOUR EMPLOYEES' INJURY WITH CONCERN. Let him know that you are going to see that he gets the medical attention that is required. Let him know that you are reporting this to your insurance carrier and that they will be in touch with him as soon as possible. Give him the name of the insurance carrier if he requests it.

2. IF YOUR EMPLOYEE IS UNABLE TO WORK BECAUSE OF HIS INJURY, SEE TO IT THAT HE GETS PAID HIS WORKER'S COMPENSATION BENEFITS IMMEDIATELY. You may even have to call the insurance company and advise them to pay your employee. Insurance companies tend to drag their feet and need a little prompting. Advise the injured employee that you are doing the best that you can to help him get his benefits.

3. NEVER MENTION OR THREATEN AN EMPLOYEE WITH LOSS OF HIS JOB BECAUSE OF HIS WORK INJURY. In fact, it would be best to assure the employee that he will have his job when he is physically able to return to work. Most people come to see us because they are not receiving their medical benefits or they are not receiving their worker's compensation payments while they are disabled. Many come to see us when their job security is threatened. If you pay attention to the above suggestions, and pay attention to your injured employees' injury, then I can assure you that you will cut down on your claims, thus saving you many premium dollars.
